In the framework of the “North South Mediterranean Dialogue”, Mr Charles-Ferdinand Nothomb, President of the European Movement International’s Mediterranean Committee, and Mr Henrik H. Kröner, Secretary General of the European Movement International, have been invited to participate in a conference organised by UNESCO, ISESCO, ALESCO and the Anna Lindh Foundation for culture, entitled: “Fostering dialogue among cultures and civilisations through concrete and sustained action” on the 14, 15 and 16 June.

The objective of this conference is to promote:

“Concrete and sustained activities - which aim to make dialogue between cultures and civilizations a daily reality – must be created and implemented in all regions by the widest possible range of partners and actors concerned, to support peace on the domestic level and also between nations.

The challenge is to build on the numerous reports, declarations and initiatives devoted to the dialogue between cultures and civilizations, strengthening them and assuring their sustainability by transforming them into concrete and specific measures which can realistically be implemented in a given period of time”.
